Chapitan Kane made a particular study of the history of the Hely Land while cruising in the Mediterranean, and part of these researches have been made public in a lecture entitled. The Great Battles of Israel. The Chapitan is the author of "Hism; or, the Curse of the Old South Church," a romance in which the lives of army and navy officers are pictured as they really are, rather than as they are supposed to be.

While conversing with an Evening World reporter and his resemblance to Joseph Jefferson was mentioned Chapitan Kane remarked that he has had experiences similar to Mr. Jefferson's supposed death in "Rip Van Winkle." He told of three occasions on which he was thought to be dead.
